If you shop for very affordable - as in sub-$30, sub-$20, or even a sub-$5 - fountain stick and you want high-end features like a screw-on cover, a converter included, or a piston-filling mechanism then you shop for a Chinese fountain stick. Brands such as Wing Sung and Jinhao offer incredible value for money, but they may have some drawbacks that we don't expect from standard fountain pen purchases. These Chinese fountain sticks are very accessible, but they don't have websites with clear explanations and often don't come from suppliers we know and trust... though we're starting to get to know them. Most pens have very slow shipping times (sometimes 2-4 weeks in the US), so even remembering what you bought can be a problem. It is with these problems in mind that we have created this top Chinese fountain handle 2020 mega review. Note: The video was filmed in 2019, but the following information is up to date. Featured in the top Chinese pen overtaking video: Caliarts Ego - Piston filler that looks like a Twsbi 580. Nice writer and reasonable starting point for people who are new to Chinese pens. The latest version of this pen is sold as Caliarts Ego II. Jinhao 992 - Mostly Monteverde Monza, inspired by the sailor 1911 Kaco Edge - Inspired by Lamy 2000, a German pen from Schmidt Wing Sun 3003 - Pilot Prera-inspired, poor writer, spiky feather Sung Wing 3007 - Kaweco Sports clone, but fit and end worse. Writes beautifully Wing Sung 3008 - Piston filler that looks like Caliarts Ego and Twsbi Eco. Has a Lamy compatible pen. Probably the cheapest piston filler you can find. Other Chinese fountain notes pens: The Jinhao 159 - an older model but a reasonable choice if you want a larger Jinhao 51A Jinhao x450 - is known for its rubberized grip and is a popular choice for people with sweaty Jinhao x750 Moonman N3 Moonman C1 - squared-off version of the M2. You can use it with a converter or as an eyedropper Moonman M2 - a very popular choice for the best Chinese fountain pen. This $20 eyedropper is beautifully built and really shows your ink. Keep an eye on the fakes. Penbbs 308 - a simple, affordable cartridge/converter Penbbs 309 - is a higher-end take on the Chinese fountain pen, more like the Twsbi Eco than most pens on this list. The Penbbs 350 filler - a metal feather fountain body that is converted into roller Penbbs 355 - bulk filler pen, which looks very similar to the Conid Penbbs 456 - the top Chinese fountain pen and the really good vacuum-filler Penbbs 500 - an affordable pen that uses a spring filling mechanism Wing Sung 6359 - $2.00 - Lamy Al-Star clone Wing Sung 618 - Parker 51 clone, which is a good writer and quite beautiful. Unlike Parker this piston filler Wing Sung 698 - Piston filler and one of the most respected Chinese fountain pens Best Chinese Fountain Pens It is very difficult to say one of them is a clear best, but if you had to choose one, I would recommend Jinhao 992. This pen is one of the best in the Article in terms of build quality and quality control, it has a sleek pen and it looks. 992 writes like a pilot pen with a good flow of ink and great processing. It's a bit small and it's not a piston filler like some of the other pens on this list, but it still gets top marks from us. If you are looking for a maximum bang for the dollar, then you should be in the market for a Chinese piston filling pen that will undermine its Japanese and European competition at 90%. In this case you have to pick up Wing Sung 3008. This pen is a good writer with a Lamy compatible pen, so you can really update it if you happen to have a Lamy pen lying around. However, the pen has some strengths of its own so if you can get the flow right people may actually prefer the stock pen. There is also a Caliarts Ego in this category, but the quality control on this pen/feed is questionable and the $10 price tag, although not much money, puts it in a higher price class. If you want to go high class and really see what these companies are capable of, then buy yourself a Wing Sung 699. This $30 vacuum-filled fountain pen was clearly inspired by the Pilot Custom 823, but the excellent build quality, good feather, and a large, hefty body that feel like it's off a pen that costs 10 times more. Regardless of any problems, these fountain handles are gaining incredible followings and provide great value to pen buyers. Frequently asked questions What are the best Chinese brand of fountain pen?
